Belief is a product of the mind, but faith is not. Faith is a product of the spirit. The mind interferes in the process of faith more than it contributes to it. To have faith in the worst of times will no doubt require us to silence, or at least quiet, the mind. Faith is what happens when our beliefs run aground.

Faith and Belief Are Not the Same | HuffPost Life

Biblical faith is trust and commitment that result in a change of behavior. James 2:19 puts it this way: "You believe that there is one God. Good! Even the demons believe that—and shudder." The demons believe that God exists, and they may even know more about God than people do, but they do not have faith in Him.

Faith vs. belief—what is the difference? | GotQuestions.org

But – ONLY by Faith – NOT – just because you believe that to be true.. Faith and what you believe are two defferent things... Your belief is something you 'choose' – That does not ultimately require fact... Faith however – must be definitively proven, for you to 'know' in your heart it to be true or real... Validating evidence...

What Is The Difference Between Faith and Belief? A Bible Study

Faith is based on something more than logic unlike in the case of belief. Faith has the tendency to remove the worry, and it paves the way for optimism. The Bible says that faith is to hope for things, which are not seen, but at the same time which are true. The Bible says that faith must be centered on Jesus Christ in order to result in salvation. To have faith is nothing but to have confidence in something or someone.
