secret, he learned to read and write during that time, despite the fact that the once-kindly Mrs. Auld soon internalized the evils of being a slave owner. She accepted the advice of her husband and became a strident advocate of keeping slaves illiterate, for she feared losing Douglass if he gained an education.

During Douglass's seven years with Hugh and Sophia Auld, he learns to read and write. This happens despite Sophia Auld's vigilance. She has gone from a "tender-hearted woman" to a woman whose "heart became stone." When Sophia Auld sees Douglass reading, she rushes at him "with a face made all up of fury."
