Hating an enemy is what comes naturally. We need supernatural help. If we try and love our enemies apart from the help of God it will not be true love. It's only by the grace of God, and the power of the Holy Spirit at work in us, that we can love our enemies. We can only love our enemies by trusting God to help us.

I Love Being The Enemy

I think "love your enemies" is the most unreasonable thing Jesus says. And that's saying something, because it's coming from a guy who also says stuff like "eat my flesh and drink my blood," "hate your mother and father" and "sell all your possessions and give the money to the poor" (John 6:56, Luke 14:26 and Matthew 19:21, respectively).

Christians tell me that they love their enemies, and yet all I ask is—not that they love their enemies, not that they love their friends even, but that they treat those who differ from them, with simple fairness. We do not wish to be forgiven, but we wish Christians to so act that we will not have to forgive them.
