U.S. Army Rucksack of World War II. The rucksack originated with the needs of Alpine troops, such as the 10th Mountain Division, and other special forces. A mountain soldier could not fit all of his gear into the M-1928 haversack, the Army's standard backpack at the beginning of World War II. Even if he could, the haversack carried the weight high on his back and it shifted side to side, throwing him off balance while skiing or climbing.
